The developments in the agriculture and milling machinery industry, which constitutes to 3.7% of the Russian economy, have been noteworthy in recent years. The most produced product is grain amongst many other goods, due to large amounts of production. Imports have not exceeded 250 billion USD until 2021.

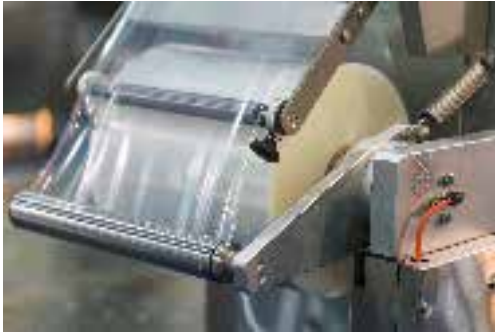

In 2021, Turkey's exports with trade between Russia increased by 27% compared to the previous year, reaching 5.7 billion USD. In terms of products, the machinery and automotive sectors stand out in Turkey's exports to Russia, according to 2021 data. These products constitute 40% of the country's exports to Russia.

Following meetings with Russian government officials, assurances have been provided regarding purchasing delegations from regions with the highest cultivated areas.

Furthermore, officials have offered options for date and location for Millagro to take place, and conveyed a message of support for promotional activities when the event is to be held.

By the end of 2022, Russia has become the fifth largest importer with its agricultural machinery imports worth 3.7 billion dollars.

Russia, which is among the world's top 5 producers with a grain harvest of approximately 130 million tons, is ranked first in buckwheat, barley, and oat production, and third in wheat and rye production, according to data from the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) of the United Nations. It is expected that the grain production, which fell to 121.4 million tons in 2021, will exceed 130 million tons in 2022, and the wheat harvest will approach a record level of 90 million tons. The increasing role of agricultural mechanization across the sector has been identified as another crucial factor behind the significant surge in agricultural production in Russia's agricultural industry in recent years.
